Early Learning reference for parents and carers

Books about starting school

Reading books together is a great way to help children work through their anxieties about starting school – even the ones they haven't had yet! A bit like a rehearsal but with a parent by their side. It's practice for skills like making new friends, asking questions and talking to a teacher.

See Libraries ACT catalogue for many more titles to borrow.

Starting School by Jane Godwin and Anna Walker

Five children are off to school for the very first time. They enjoy making friends, learning new things and discovering all that school involves. This book touches on how the children feel about starting school.

Maddie's first day

By Penny Matthews, illustrated by Liz Anelli

A picture book about the excitement of going to 'big' school for the first time. This book is great for encouraging discussion with children about their first experiences, making friends, and growing up.

Spot Goes to School by Eric Hill

Spot starts school and finds singing, playgrounds, painting and story time. This is a great introduction for little kids as to the adventure school might be. With plenty of interactive lift the flaps it makes school sound like lots of fun.

Wombat Goes To School by Jackie French

In between sleeping, scratching and chasing carrots, Mothball the wombat manages to go to school. This is a funny sequel to the Wombat series by Jackie French and is a perfect book for preschoolers.

I am Too Absolutely Small for School

Lola is a bit anxious about school, she thinks maybe she is still too small and doesn't really have time to go. She wonders whether she will have people to talk to at lunchtime and whether learning to read might be too hard. Her wise older brother Charlie assures her it will be fun.

Lola is both outspoken and brave. We love her imaginary friend Soren Lorensen who is also nervous about starting school.

The Terrible Suitcase by Emma Allen and Freya Blackwood

It's the first day of school and all the children have a special backpack, except one – she has a terrible suitcase. A story about how imagination can make magic out of anything.

This CBCA award winner is a magical tale celebrating imagination and making the best of things. Beautifully illustrated.

I Don't Want to Go To School by Stephanie Blake

Simon the Bunny is about to face his first day of school and he is scared. He says he is not going, no matter what his parents say. When Simon eventually faces school he has such a good time that he does not want to come home at the end of the day.

This is a great read aloud for families who are dealing with school refusal or problems adjusting to school. It has a good lesson in it, that if you give it a go, things just might surprise you.

What's In My Lunchbox by Peter Carnavas

Today in my lunchbox, I happened to find an apple, a sister, a fish, an egg, a bear and a dinosaur.

Full of lunchbox silliness this is a funny look at school lunches. The little boy in the story does not want to eat the apple until he realizes it is his best option after all.

With simple and humorous illustrations by Kat Chadwick this would be a great read aloud at preschool for all those kids getting used to lunchboxes.

For children age 3-6.

Old Friends New Friends by Andrew Daddo

A brand-new school year! I can't wait!

Hang on... None of my old friends are in my new class. This empowering and relatable picture book is about making friends and being yourself.

First Day by Andrew Daddo

This children's picture book captures a modern first day of school – iPhone pictures and all. Covering the anticipation and nerves of a first day and that both mother and child may have to be a bit brave. This school starter assures her mum that tomorrow will be easier.

Look, There's a Hippopotamus in the Playground Eating Cake by Hazel Edwards

I've got a new school bag. I put my red drink bottle and my red lunch box in my school bag. My hippopotamus is packing his school bag too. Together with her hippopotamus, the little girl is starting school. They meet her teacher, eat lunch in the playground and make new friends. This is a reassuring story for new school starters. The little girl's imaginary hippopotamus goes to school with her so that he will not be lonely at home. This is a good read aloud to have up your sleeve prior to starting school.

Twig by Aura Parker

Why won't someone play with me? Heidi is a stick insect. She is tall and long like the twig of a tree. It is her first day at a busy bug school, where she hopes to learn and make new friends. Sadly, making friends is that much more difficult when no-one can find you! Can you spot Heidi? This is a gorgeous story about a little girl, who happens to look like a twig, who just wants to make friends. This is a joyful book about being different and accepted.

My friends are all different by Rosie Smith & Bruce Whatley.

Whether big or small, slow or fast, my friends are the best. My friends are the best because they are all different, what about yours?

Meesha Makes Friends by Tom Percival

Meesha loves making things ... But there's one thing she finds difficult to make - friends. She doesn't know quite what to do, what to say or when to say it, and she struggles reading and responding to social cues. A warm and affectionate look at the joys and difficulties of making and keeping friends, relating to others, and finding your place in the world.

Big Friends Linda Sarah & Benji Davies

Best friends Etho and Birt love going up Sudden Hill and sitting in simple cardboard boxes imagining they are kings, soldiers, astronauts, or pirates until Shu asks to join them, and their "two-by-two rhythm" is disturbed.

Freddy & Frito and the Clubhouse Rules by Alison Friend

Best friends Frito and Freddy want a place where they can play together that has plenty of space and not too many rules, so they build a clubhouse that is perfect--until their families and friends come to visit.

Sophie makes new friends by Kerry Malone, illustrated by Meaghan Thomson

It's Sophie's first day at her new big city school. Without her old friends, who will sit with her at recess? Will she make new friends? She eventually finds the courage to say hello to Phoebe. Will Phoebe convince Sophie to join the skipping team?
